

REACH Your Potential Treating Addiction

REACH (Recognizing and Eliminating disparities in Addiction through Culturally informed Healthcare) is a program solely dedicated to mentoring and cultivating culturally responsive fellows and trainees, who are equipped to address healthcare inequities in addiction, especially in underrepresented populations.

How to Apply

Applications are being accepted for the REACH program at this time. Please email reach.program@yale.edu if interested. Medical students, residents, and advanced health professional trainees from underrepresented backgrounds are encouraged to apply. Also, those currently pursuing a fellowship in addiction or interested in applying to an addiction fellowship, regardless of medical specialty or racial and ethnic background are also encouraged to apply.

For any questions please email reach.program@yale.edu

REACH is directed by Ayana Jordan, MD, PhD, Assistant Professor and Addiction Psychiatrist at Yale, along with Jeanette Tetrault, MD, Associate Professor and Program Director for Addiction Medicine also at Yale, and CEO of AAAP Kathryn Cates-Wessel.

Funding for this initiative was made possible (in part) by grant no. 1H79TI081358-01 from SAMHSA. The views expressed in written conference materials or publications and by speakers and moderators do not necessarily reflect the official policies of the Department of Health and Human Services; nor does mention of trade names, commercial practices, or organizations imply endorsement by the U.S. government.